Following our earlier submission, we would add photographic evidence of the mud and mess that accumulates directly below the site of the barn. Please note that, having had a good look this morning, it seems clear that all except rather small vehicles will not turn around in the barn forecourt, especially if it has some kind of patio. Cars will reverse out into the muddy patch that blocks the drains below our barn and creates flooding. That is what cars have always done in this area. The images are below:
