Good afternoon Leonardo

Floor plans and elevations of these structures are not necessary as they are small moveable structures, much like the images below:

Please note; these are not images taken from the site, but it gives you an idea of the types of small shelters (which are chattels and do not need planning permission) used in the enclosures for the goats and pigs.

I hope this helps.

Kind regards

Good afternoon Debbie,

Thank you for your email.

Can you please provide details of the movable structures, such as floor & elevation plans?

Thank you

Good afternoon Leonardo

My apologies for the delay in getting back to you.

1. I have updated the covering letter accordingly, please see attached.

2. Yes, the livestock display area is the snip that you show. The paddock structures are small, low level, moveable structures.

Kind regards

Good morning Debbie,

Thank you for your prompt response.

Can I just clarify with you a couple more points from the design and access statement?

1. The storage container (No.8) is not within the retrospective elements of the application (No.9 onwards); however, the container is shown on the existing block plan. Can you please advise whether the container is retrospective or not?
2. Extract from paragraph 12: In addition to this, a livestock display area is located the west of the farm shop and provides a point of interest to visitors of all ages, displaying a variety of farm animals. I would assume you are referring to the below snip from the block plan

Can you please advise what is the type of structure for the paddocks?

Thank you
